Subject: Comment on closed session

I found it very strange that the closed session items mentioned peoples names and what they were about. I do not know the people mentioned, and I also do not think what was made public in agenda item was necessary. Even closed session items regarding the Millsite only give an address and not the owners names. Other closed session items only say what it is regarding, not who and why. I have never seen personal info on a closed session item, this seems intentional and very wrong in my opinion.

This should not be how the public is treated, since the city supposidly works for the public. This seems like a continuation of the remarks made by staff members complaining about public comment and planning commission members at the start of the last planning commission meeting.

We have many amazing people working for the city, and these kind of actions reflect badly on the city as a whole.
